The Most Comprehensive Detainee List On The Web

Cageprisoners.com
13-05-04
Background Behind This Report

In early 2004, United Press International correspondent, John D produced a ground-breaking report , purporting to establish the natio of 95% of the detainees being held in US custody at its naval ba Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. The first of its kind, it accounted for 61 total, gathering information from global media reports, as well a deriving information from meetings with government officials.
However, Daly's report was restricted to the numbers of detaine nationality, with no mention of the actual names of the detainee of this information was then made available, in the Arabic langu press, in the al-Rai al-Am report by Khalil Khalaf and Dahim al-(the most extensive to date in listing 810 prisoners. Unfortunatel latter contained a number of inaccuracies, duplicate names, and restricted to an Arabic-speaking audience only.
Cageprisoners.com therefore undertook the task of translating t names from the al-Rai al-Am report, verifying and supplementir information with the names of the detainees from our original "p gallery" database since October 2003 – for which much thanks a to the Arabic site Alasra.org for the names of the Saudi and Yen detainees - as well as further in-depth research from media rep figures from the UPI report.
Earlier this month (1-05-04) the American newspaper, the Wash Post, published the first detailed compilation of detainees into one list in English of the research of which came from Cageprisoners.com and Alas We have extracted the names of some detainees from this publi namely those of the Tunisian prisoners in their entirety, and sor the Turkish, Afghani and Pakistani prisoners. Although the Post claimed to have accounted for 370 detainees, there are a numb duplicate prisoners and mistakes, so the figure is somewhat sm

The Detainees

Forgotten Detainees

The Most Comprehensive Detainee List on the Web

The vast majority of the detainees held in the US naval base in Guantanamo Bay were arrested in Afghanistan or Pakistan, betv November 2001 and January 2002, after the US invasion of Afgl in the wake of the September 11th attacks. In addition to the fa many of these were arrested far from the scene of any fighting, significant number were also the victims of extra-judicial kidnap and extraditions from countries distant from the Afghan-Pak reg such as Gambia, Bosnia, Malawi and Zambia. In nearly all cases abducted were transported first to US Bases in Afghanistan befc being detained in the long term in Cuba.

The range of countries from which the detainees originate is est to be between 38 countries (according to the UPI report), other: suggest 42, and some indicate 44.

The Pentagon officially says that there were approximately 660 detainees and that 120 of those have been released, leaving the number of inmates at Guantanamo at 559. However, it should b that there are indications that the actual number of detainees is higher than the US allege, 660, but closer to 700 or 800. Dr. Na Nu'aymi, the former Qatari Minister of Justice who is presently a the legal representative on behalf of more than a hundred detai elaborates that this is due to the numbers captured after the ini sweep in Afghanistan, and those who have been transferred froı various countries. The establishment of a new detention facility base, Camp 5, a fortnight ago, built to house 100 inmates, brin total capacity of the US base to 1,100 detainees, would further this. With regular caches of prisoners every few months, it is als believed that Guantanamo will become a future destination for r prisoners held in detention in Iraq.

The report currently is limited to presenting the names of the m detainees. However, it is now believed that there are also femal inmates in Guantanamo, at least one of these - whose nationalit age are unknown - has been reported in the press, as an allege Qaeda member" arrested in Afghanistan and transported to Cub
